Purpose (community connection through shared interests): These purchases support a Cooking Competition designed to bring students together through a shared hobby rather than a timed or pressure-based contest. Participants prepare dishes on their own time, allowing creativity, personal expression, and cultural backgrounds to be highlighted, and then bring their food to the event for judging and community engagement.

Hospitality note: Black-and-gold plates are used exclusively for judges to ensure professional food presentation and evaluation. Any remaining plates may be reused for future SGA food-related events.

Prize note (academic and practical value): The iPad serves as both an educational resource and a practical tool for the winning participant, supporting academic coursework while also enabling recipe organization, culinary research, and continued skill development beyond the event.
